

CURRICULUM VITAE COMPLETE

Maria de Jesus Simões Barroso Soares

Maria de Jesus Simões Barroso Soares has a degree in Historical and Philosophical Sciences from the Faculty of Arts, Lisbon and the course of Dramatic Arts from the National Conservatory.

While studying at the university, she performed in the National Theatre for four years but was later removed as a result of her political positions as member of the Democratic Opposition to the regime of Salazar. Even though qualified to do so, during the regimes of Salazar and Marcelo Caetano, she was forbidden to teach, even in private schools.

She always had an active role in cultural life, mainly through her recitals of Portuguese and foreign poetry.

In 1949 she married her university colleague, Mário Soares, with whom she has two children: Isabel and João. She has five grandchildren from her son.

She the Democratic Opposition's candidate for Member of Parliament in 1969, during the regime of Marcelo Caetano. She participated in the 111 Congress of the Democratic Opposition in Aveiro in 1973. She was present in Bad-Munstereifel at the time of the foundation of the Socialist Party. Having participated in all the electoral campaigns since April 25th, she was elected Member of Parliament for the districts of Santarém, Oporto and Algarve. For many years she has run a private school, founded by her father in law, João Soares, a teacher.

Over the last ten years, from 1986 to March 9th 1996, as wife of the President of the Republic, she has been involved in activities aimed at supporting the areas of culture, education and family, childhood, social solidarity, female dimension, health, the integration of the disabled and the prevention of violence.

In Portugal, she has instigated reflection and discussion on media violence, having vehemently condemned all situations in which human rights are violated. She has aided and defended the welfare and causes of victims of war, starvation, racism, xenophobia, of abused women and children and social delinquents. She has never forgotten the people of Timor.

APEV (Association for the Study and Prevention of Violence), Emergência Infantil (Child Emergency) and the Foundation Pro Dignitate are some of the many institutions she has founded or helped to create.

Since March 9th 1996 the extent of her activity has remained unchanged on both a national and international level. It is as if society has taken possession of her as one of its more humane, dynamic and illustrious members, to ensure her protagonism in truly essential areas of life.

In a structured manner and according to areas of intervention, we will now go on to refer to the more prominent aspects of Maria de Jesus Barroso Soares' activity, as well as to the academic and honorary distinctions she has been granted.
